

Infinite of One

Looking at God through Religion is telescoping a single star and calling it the Universe.

Nick Jameson, aka 'Gnostic Nick,' is a spiritual but not religious theologian, philosopher and progressive. Harnessing a multitude of genres, his work brings the reader and listener into the liberating truth of the ubiquity of God, the all-encompassing Source of conscious energy born through Mother Matter into infinite forms of its formlessness. Every incarnation of life is holy, because every embodiment of Being is a being born of God 'big banging' into spacetime and matter. Everyone speaks to God all the time, whether they know it or not, for the prophet lives in every heart, the gateway of energy into matter, its truths felt as love. Those that come to be known as prophets are simply those whom most clearly hear and heed the messages of Source.

- There are no divided souls slated for damnation or ecstasy, but one 'soul,' Source, the essential energy common to every embodiment of Itself; all being is a form of The Being
- You don't 'go' anywhere when you die, because you're already here, in the eternal present; the afterlife myth has always been a means to control you during your life
- God chose spacetime and matter for the aspect of infinite unique experiences of being that are invaluable to every form of being because they end, with no single moment, no present, ever being repeated the same way to the same form of the Source Being twice
- The truth of God belongs to everyone equally, regardless of anything; no one group of people, no tribe or bloodline, is more deserving of the holy communion than any other
- Religion is the corruption of the spirituality of sages by Empire to manipulate people's fear and doubt, falsely reducing the Everything to the narrow, controllable something

Nick's most recent book is Why God Chose THIS, a collection of short papers from his website.
